

Filtering in Finance: Theory and Numerics

Thorsten Schmidt

TU Chemnitz, Germany

Nonlinear filtering methods have become a frequently used methodology in mathematical finance. In this talk we consider some important examples with a focus on processes with diffusive components and jumps. Typically the solution of the problem leads to stochastic partial differential equations requiring sophisticated numerical methods and we study some promising algorithms.